Root Cellar

Exterior

East of the house is a root cellar. It is made of cast-in-place concrete, with an segmented arch roof covered by soil. An enclosed staircase, also of cast-in-place concrete with a wood door, offers access to the structure. The cellar was built about 1912.

East of the root cellar is a concrete pad of unknown function.

Interior

The interior of the root cellar is unfinished concrete walls and a concrete floor.

Existing Condition

The root cellar is in good condition with only minor evidence of deterioration of the concrete on the exposed entryway.
